He's just such a neat guy. And from what I hear, pretty nice in person, too. (Disclaimer: This is based solely on hearsay from a friend of my kid's who met him on the subway in NYC one day.)

Friends went to a signing of his at (edited*), where he was cordial above & beyond, to both customers & store staff. He even broke cover enough, that, as it was getting pretty late, he went down the line signing the books for parents of small children so they could get them home.

Bread?

Hey, Chaz, if you don't mind, I've got a shoggoth question. Is there a good way to use my bread robot to make shoggoth bread?

(My deQuervain's tenosynovitis is flaring up again, and kneading is right out, as is continuing to learn Beethoven's "Adagio Cantabile." I am a very bitchy person about that.)

That would make me cranky too.

Since I'm in a cast, I've tried using my robot to do the kneading, on the "dough" cycle. First knead the sponge. Then put it in the fridge for eight hours to get sour. Then take it out, add the stuff that makes it bread (salt and more flour) and run it through the dough cycle again.

Rise, shape, and bake as usual.

Oh, and I should have said, you don't even have to take it out of the bread pan--just put the whole thing into the fridge overnight. And then in the morning, you could knead in the salt and additional flour, rise it in the pan for a couple of hours, and then use the bake-only feature on your bread machine (if it has one) to make a funny looking square loaf.

"Cranky" is a very polite way of describing my mood lately. wry

Thank you for the directions; I'll try them Tuesday, since my friend Liz is coming over Wednesday & Thursday. (Yay for having a minion for a couple of days!)

And... you're still in a cast? Meep. Bet you'll be glad when it's off! (And eventually you might be able to turn attempting-to-do-things-while-in-a-cast into a funny story or three; mine is filling out job applications and answering questions in interviews, back when "assistant church organist" was still recent enough to be on the resume: "Why did you leave that job?" "I broke my wrist and couldn't play." :))

Hope you're doing better, now that the cast is gone. Must be almost like relearning how to do things (at least that's how I remember it).
